Engineered Modal Rationalism?

Maybe not, we'll see. I'm going to use this talk to recap on where I am with my views on the epistemology of modality. Basically, I'm a firm non-rationalist when it comes to modal knowledge about concrete entities, but this means there are irremediable limits to our modal vision. I then want to discuss with you (and seek help about) a couple of thoughts that worry me about these limits: on their impact on philosophy, on a threat to my metaphysical views on modality, and on an exploratory manoeuvre to cope with these limits.

Alle Interessierten, insbesondere Studierende, sind herzlich eingeladen.
